QUEEN EMMA IN WASHINGTON.

The President Receives Her in a Neat Little Speech.

Washington, August 14—A very disagreeable storm prevailing all the early part of the day, Queen Emma was compelled to confine herself to her hotel until after lunch, which was served to her at one o clock. Willard's was a scene of considerable idle curiosity throughout the day, large numbers of people stand-in about the halls and doorways, in hopes of getting a stray glance at royalty. The storm abating this afternson, carriages were ordered, and, under the guidauce

Queen Emma wore a train dress of rich black satin, ornamented with simi-larly colored lace and bugles. Across her breast, running over her right shoulder, she wore a wide mauve ribbon. Around her neck was a beautiful necklace of jet pendants, suspended from which in the centre, was a large diamond brooch. On her head she were a white lace veil, studded with small and chaste falness in her sunny days of royalty. She has very large, expressive eyes, indicative, as phrenologists declare, of language; and, in truth, if ever eyes could speak, hers do. Her color is of an olive hue; although seen far behind, the color of the skin of her shoulders seemed no less fair than any of the many beautiful ladies present. Her face, however, is considerably darker, so much so, indeed, that it led me to believe much of her color may be induced by the exposures she experienced in her recent travels.

From the Richmond Times, 16th.] From the Richmond Times, 16th.]

A few days since Dr. Wm. H. Taylor, of Jefferson Ward, one of the members of the Board of Health, was called upon to visit an infant of Martha Scott, who was reported to be very ill in consequence of the bite of a very large house spider. The doctor arrived in good time after being sent for; but when he got there he found that he was too late, as the little sufferer must breathe its last in the little sufferer must breathe its last in a few hours. The bite was in the knee, inch.

Accordingly, messengers were dispatched—one for Prof. Samton, a jet black astrologist, and the other for Prof. Brownlow, a negro phrenologist, both "so-called." These distinguished both "so-called." These distinguished life-savers arrived amid great pomp, and with much ceremony, retired for consultation. As might be expected, these learned Africans radically disagreed, each contending that his mode of practice was the only one which could save the patient. They were closeted for two or three hours—in the meantime the sufferer was becoming worse—at the end of which time they came forth and announced that no compromise could be agreed on, and it, therefore, devolved upon the parents to decide who should have charge of the matter.

The Radical crowd favored the astrologer's principle, which was that the spider should be first killed, and then seven kinds of roots and five kinds of herbs should be pounded up and the extract applied to the bitten part; while the Conservatives favored, in the most valuement manner, the catching of of Mr. R. The Era says that as soon as released he went to Cotton Plant and obtained a State's warrant for the two he recognized — Stracener and Berry were their names — who were ar-raigned before Justice Lentz of Cotton Plant. The evidence for the State was in accordance with the above facts. But one of the accused parties—Berry—ad-duced evidence by which he proved that he was at another place at the hour the outrage was perpetrated. It is believed that the witnesses who deposed this testi-mony were the accomplices of Berry. Upon this evidence both parties were re-

McKinney readily accepted; and, leaping from his wagon, nistol in hand, about twenty feet apart. pistol in hand, about twenty feet spart, the firing between the parties com-menced. Each party fired three shots, any one of which would have proved fatal. Staggs received the first shot in the month, the next in the throat, and the third is the breast. McKinney was shot three times in the breast. When these shots were fired, the parties turned their backs upon each other, walked about the same distance from the scene, and both fell about the same instant, one upon his back and the other upon his face, and died with pistols in hand. This occasioned a good deal of promisenous shooting—about twenty random shots—

Just out of Their Holes-Four Confederates Come in and Surrender. The Petersburg Index of Wednesday

The Petersburg Index of Wednesday relates the following:

The screnity of the office of the commanding officer of this post was agitated on yesterday by the apparition of four Confederate soldiers, who gave their names and descriptive lists as follows:

Anthony Morkas, Co. E, 52d Georgia Infantry, 3d Army Corps A. N. V.

Thomas Wells, ditto.

James Brinberter, ditto.

Allen Tewsberry, 43d Louisiana, ditto.

A more ragged set of rebels had never appeared before the Colonel during all the dealing he has ever had with the "ragged rebels" of Lee's army. Tewsberry was a sort of walking illustration of original patchwork. His clothing had been tied and sewed and stack together been tied and sewed and stuck together with strings, thread, and thorns, until there did not appear a solitary square inch upon it which had not been tied up, sewed up, or stuck up in some way or other. His companions were not quite so bal off, one having a pair of blue, Yankee pants, with only half a dozen rents in it; another hiding the raggedness of his gray pants with a flowing, though ribbony, Yankee over-coat, and the other making his decency apparent by concealing the defects of his upper garments with an old oil cloth fly, awfully bedaubed with mud.

Tewsherry stated to the Colonel that he and his party stopped at the Appomattox, about seven miles above the city, after the evacuation of Petersourg, city, after the evacuation of Petersourg, for the purpose, at first, of resting; that they stayed longer than they expected, and were cut off. They then made a vow to live on that spot, and navor go home or give up until the Confederacy was completely annihilated. They sought out a cave on the banks of the upon fish and game, and occasionally roasting ears, during all last summer, and upon bread made of corn they had gathered from the corn-fields, and an occasional pig they found without a mother, in their rambles during the win-ter. This spring and summer they lived ter. This spring and summer they lived as they did last summer, but recently, hearing from an old negro man that the Confederacy had undoubtedly "gone up," they concluded to quit the barbarian life and surrender. They marched to the city yersterday morning, with their muskets and accontrements, stacked arms in front of headquarters, sent in word that they were the remnant of the Army of Northern Virginia, and that they wished to surrender upon the conditions accorded to the main body. Col. Milton cordially assented to their request, gave them transportation to their omes, and bade them adieu. The illustrious four roamed about town for a short time, had new suits of clothing given them, and, after being made about half drunk, embarked on the southern trains for their homes.

Hon. Alex. H. Stephens. Mr. Stephens left his home in Crawfordsville, Georgia, a short time since, and, without making any stoppage except the necessary change of cars, proceeded to Washington. Asriving there he had a short interview with the Presi-dent, and left Washington Wednesday morning at eleven o'clock for Philadel-phia, where he arrived the same evening about six o'clock. The arrival of Mr.
Stephens was known to but very few

During the night, however, the ex-Vice President was seized with a severe attack President was seized with a severe attack of illness, and woke up Tuesday morning greatly enfeebled, so much so that it was not deemed advisable for him to leave the house. In answer to questions Mr. Stephens stated that he came for the purpose of attending the Convention, but after arriving doubted the advisability of making his appearance at the wigwam. His main objection appeared to be, this morning, that his health was in such an enfeebled state that he could do nothing more than be a looker on in Venice. more than be a looker on in Venice, should be make his appearance; and he stated that he feared being called on to make a speech, which he did not feel able to do.
